What is AAUW?

AAUW is a national non-partisan non-profit organization with local branches, founded in 1881. Our local Livermore-Pleasanton-Dublin branch was formed in 1952 and has spearheaded many community projects. One such endeavor was the formation of a community orchestra which is now the Livermore-Amador Symphony.

AAUW is a leading advocate of programs that support equity for women and girls. At the national level, AAUW is the sponsor of the National Conference for College Women Student Leaders. AAUW California founded Tech Trek, a science and math summer camp for young women entering the eighth grade in the fall. These one-week camps are held on college campuses and feature hands on activities in math, science and related fields. Tech Trek has expanded to become a national project.

Our branch has sent girls to camp for eighteen years.

Our local branch has raised money for and offered scholarships to local women in their third /fourth year of college since 1966 and established the Livermore-Pleasanton-Dublin AAUW Scholarship Foundation in 1989. We have awarded over $65,000 to such students.

Nationally, the AAUW Fund supports women with grants and fellowships to complete degrees and graduate work. Groundbreaking research is also supported by the Fund. A recent publication is "Solving the Equation: The Variables for Women's Success in Engineering and Computing." AAUW's Legal Advocacy Fund supports litigants in gender-based education and employment discrimination cases.

AAUW supports advocacy in both Sacramento and Washington DC and works in partnership with the California Commission on the Status of Women, National Organization for Women, League of Women Voters, and many other organizations to advocate on issues such as unfair pay, gender discrimination, racial discrimination, Social Security, educational issues, and women's health care.

Our branch offers a variety of programs throughout the year. In addition, there are many interest groups which have been formed by members over the years and which are open to all Branch members. These groups allow you to share your passion, learn a new skill or expand your intellectual horizons, all while meeting members on a more intimate level. In addition to established interest groups, like-minded members are always welcome to form new groups.
